These classes helped me in one of my most recent classes, Software Dev. Methods and tools. I was a part of a team that developed an online storage system for CU's OIT department. Our website takes in a universal log-in for all employees of the OIT department, allowing each to store customer's data online rather than on paper. We used GitHub to access our code changes easily. Node.js was utilized to connect to the Express server, and MongoDB was used for the database. For the front end, we used Javascript with a new framework called React.js.
